

PBIS on WHEELS

DATA

- Do you look at the discipline history for buses?
- Did you know that you can see patterns in the referrals?
- Do you ask your drivers what they think of bus discipline?
- Do you work with your Administrators to make riding the bus a success?

Gathering this information will help you start creating a student matrix for bus expectations!!!

1st----Create your team!

- Post in your driver's lounge the desire to look at student behavior and the need for a team to help you look at this data. Make a few bullet points of the objective of this group.
- Examples:
 - Common language
 - Writing referrals systematically
 - Increase in good behavior

2nd---Dive in with your team

- Discuss the data gathered with your team
- Determine what the appropriate expectation looks like and sounds like on a school bus
- If you have not already-determine what the expectations are in each of the school you serve (most districts have a few that are across the district)
- Create the statements or verbiage that will correlate with each expectation

Safe, Respectful, Responsible

3rd---Driver buy-in

Present to the drivers the findings of the data analysis as well as the team's ideas for what the expectations look like and sound like.

It is imperative at this time to take input from your drivers and make necessary adjustments.

This allows for drivers to see and understand the purpose of creating the matrix. A solution to a problem.

It also serves as the first training of PBS.
